02-Aug-2023 - Increased security near certain in near term after government foils coup attempt

Ground: Sierra Leone: Aviation security

Increased security is near certain (95%) at key sites and Freetown's Lungi International Airport (GFL/FNA) in the near term (seven days) following a reported foiled coup attempt. According to the country's government, several people, including senior members of the country's military leadership, were arrested in an alleged plot to exploit peaceful protests planned between 7 and 10 August to 'unleash violent attacks against state institutions and peaceful citizens'.

The country has faced political tensions since the election in June, which saw President Julius Bio re-elected. The president did not attend the emergency Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) meeting on 30 July in Abuja, Nigeria, to address the coup in Niger. Security around the president and State House in Freetown remains tense as the main opposition, All Peoples Congress (APC) party, and international observers call for the publication of all polling station results to verify the legitimacy of the country's election.

Analysis

Given the recent coups in Niger, neighbouring Guinea, Mali and Burkina Faso, concerns will be heightened in Freetown and the wider region that further attempts to overthrow governments may occur. As such, despite these arrests, Sierra Leone is likely to continue to face political instability and a possible attempted coup d'etat in the coming months. Unrest over the results of the recent election and continued poor economic performance is also likely in the coming days. Previous anti-government unrest caused by high levels of inflation involved violent riots on 10 August 2022, with
